COUNCIL CONSIDERS SEVERAL PROBLEMS AT MONDAY SESSION

At the meeting of the City Council last Monday evening, all members were present, Mayor H. H. Smith presiding. Councilman Sundermann acted as city clerk, in the absence of B. C. Ross, who is on his vacation.

The Veterans' Welfare Board of California requested the Council to clear certain pieces of property in Daly City belonging to World war veterans from taxation. This matter was referred to the city attorney for advice.

A communication from a resident on Frankfort street, asking about a modern fire department, was filed, owing to the absence of the writer.

A communication was received from the Fire Commissioners, asking that unemployed firemen be given the preference in the work of cleaning the streets of weeds, the communication being referred to the street committee.

The light committee was instructed to get in touch with the Pacific Gas and Electric Company and request that the company appoint a resident trouble man in this district.

The city attorney was instructed to report on the legal right of the City Council to compel the destruction of trees and roots that annoy resident of the city. This condition has become serious in some sections and the city has been asked to take some step to remedy the condition.

The library committee reported 2,648 books being issued from the city library during the past month.

Several property owners, anxious to open Irvington street from Templeton avenue to Acton street, were present, and reported that they could not come to any agreement in regard to the improvement. The members of the City Council decided to take the matter in hand, and if the question is not settled by the time of the next meeting, the Coucil will take some definite steps.

The ordinance committee reported that the Butchers' Union would have a committee at the next Council meeting, to speak on the new butcher shop ordinance, which compels all shops to close on Sundays.

Several residents in the neighborhood of Vista Grande avenue and Woodrow street asked for a mail box to be installed in that section. The Council will make this request of the Postal Department.

The next meeting of the City council will be held on July 23.

RAPHAEL COMPANI SUCCUMBS TO ATTACK OF INFLUENZA

It was with much sorrow that the many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Compani, of Los Banos avenue, learned of the death of their son Raphael, at Community hosiptal on last Tuesday, after an attack of influenza. Up until the time of his illness, Raphael was employed by Dave Campbell, local plumbing contractor, who speaks very highly of him.

Besides his mother and father, Raphael leaves six brothers to mourn his loss, Joseph, Dominic, John, Tommy, Albert and Frank. He was a native of San Francisco, aged 20 years. On last Wednesday evening services were held at 8:30 o'clock by Colma-Vista Grande Aerie No. 1848, F. O. E., of which he was a member. The funeral was held this Friday morning at 9:15, from the mortuary chapel of W. C. Lasswell & Co., thence to St. Maximus church, where a requiem high mass was celebrated for the repose of his soul. Interment was at the Italian cemetery.

OFFICERS ARE INSTALLED BY CROCKER DE MOLAY

On Thursday evening, July 5, at the Masonic Temple, Daly City, the newly elected officers of Crocker Chapter, Order of De Molay, were installed with impressive ceremonies.

The installing officers were Henry Blaylock, Harold Johnson, Edwin Kingsland, Earl Eldrup and David Gehringer.

At the conclusion of the installation ceremonies, dancing was enjoyed by the De Molays and their guests.

WESTERN PACIFIC TO BUILD PENINSULA LINE

Good news to residents of the Peninsula came last Tuesday in the announcement by the Western Pacific railroad that it will build a line up the Peninsula from a point southeast of Redwood City to a terminal in San Francisco.

The Peninsula line will be part of a new state-wide network of railroad lines to be established by the Western Pacific at a total cost of $13,500,000. Work on the San Mateo county line will be the first started and will cost approximately $3,700,000.

Eventually the Western Pacific line from Redwood City will cross the bay and connect with the lines running into Sacramento and San Joaquin valleys and eastward. This development will place the San Mateo county line at the western end of the Western Pacific's transcontinental system and is expected to force railroad freight rates down to a point where San Mateo county can look for unprecedented industrial development along its great stetch of waterfront.

The company's plans for the extensive program of railroad development in eleven counties of Central California, calling for the huge expenditure, were disclosed Tuesday with the filing at Sacramento of incorporation papers for its new fifteen million dollar subsidiary, the Western Pacific California Railroad Company. The counties directly concerned in this program are San Francisco, San Mateo, Sacramento, San Joaquin, Yolo, Stanislaus, Merced, Madera, Fresno, Tulare and Kings.

Special attention is being paid to development of industry and it is noted that there will be a business agreement between the Western Pacific and the South San Francisco Belt Railway, which serves the Union Stock Yards, packing houses and factories in South San Francisco.

Complete plans of the Western Pacific Company as announced last Tuesday are as follows:

Immediate construction of a line from a San Francisco terminal, down the Peninsula to Redwood City. The ultimate extension of this line to Niles, Alameda county, for connection with the main line.

Immediate construction of a line from Nilegarden, on the Western Pacific main line, 11 miles southwest of Stockton, through the San Joaquin valley, to Kings river, via Fresno. Ultimate extension of this line from Kings river to Bakersfield.

Construction of a line by the Sacramento Northern Railway, another subsidiary, from a junction with the Holland branch to Ryde, in the southwestern part of Sacramento county.

Construction of a branch line from Brack, near Stockton, for a distance of three and a half miles east.

ENTERTAIN IN HONOR OF DALY CITY COUPLE

Mr. and Mrs. L. Poulos, of South San Francisco, entertained at their home, on Tuesday evening of last week, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. G. Spoulos, of Daly City, the gathering being in the nature of a shower for Mr. and Mrs. Spoulos, who received many beautiful and useful gifts from their friends. The evening was spent in dancing and singing, a tempting dinner being served by the hostess. Those who enjoyed Mr. and Mrs. Poulos' hospitality were Mr. and Mrs. Theo Bachman, Mr. Gus Likis, Mr. and Mrs. William Doyle and son, of South San Francisco; Mr. Ted Pretzer of Fresno; Mr. and Mrs. P. Pavlos, Mrs. A. Shaw, Mr. and Mrs. G. Spoulos, of Daly City; Mr. and Mrs. R. Montanos and daughters, of San Francisco; and Mr. and Mrs. Rannebaum, of Colma.

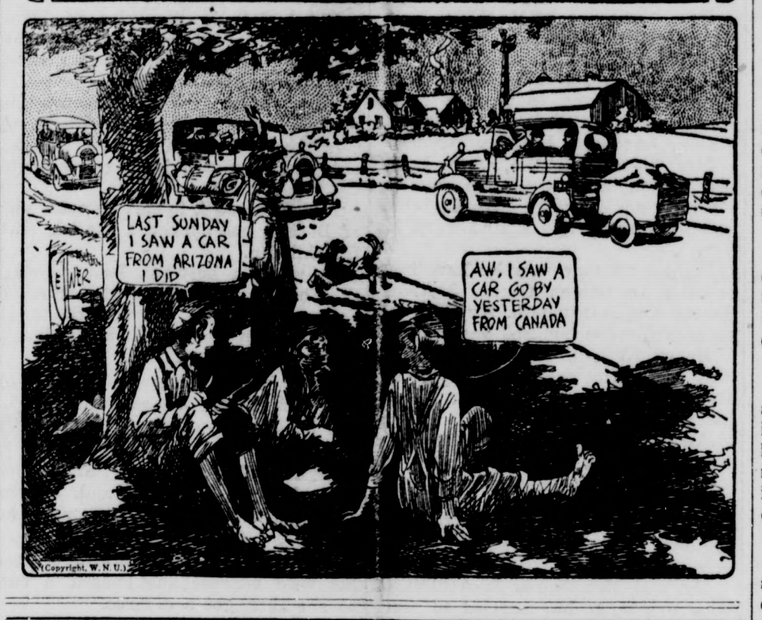
LOCAL PASTOR AND BRIDE RETURN FROM HONEYMOON

Rev. and Mrs. Fisher returned from their honeymoon last Friday, after having spent two weeks in the Feather River country. Receptions were tendered the pastor and his wife at Westwood, Taylorsville, Engelmine, Greenville and Cresent Mills, and many beautiful gifts were presented to the bride and groom. Mr. Fisher was pastor of the Methodist church in this section of Plumas county for several years. During the trip the young couple spent a day at Mt. Lassen.

A REDUCTION IN TIRE PRICES

George E. Archer, of the County Line Service Station, 5900 Mission street, who sells Goodyear tires, has been busy the last few days supplying the demands of tire users, following his announcement of a substantial reduction in the price of Goodyear tires. Mr. Archer, who is the local Ford dealer, feels that he has two of the best sellers on the market in the new Ford and Goodyear tires.

Touring Season is On



Annual Northern Outing

Having given attention to the last of many insistent demands, every one important in a measure, the writer decided he could wait no longer. June, with its romances had sped and July with its burning patriotic holiday had come.

His friend W. H. Clay, who had become identified as his companion on such an outing, could not forsake his office, even though the desire was great and the contemplated pleasures alluring. The probability of the proffer of a generous fee that might not fall his way held him chained to his post.

Although the unavoidable loss of Mr. Clay's company was a real disappointment, he concluded to be content with the train and the views of of the Valley of the Moon. When he was tired viewing, the rattle and rumble and roar of the engine and cars could lull him to restful slumber.

So he thought, until the very day of going forth was at hand. Then another friend, H. C. Joscelyn, came to his assistance, offering the luxury of his modern Buick and the safety of his own driving. Ascertaining beyond question that the kindness was not too great to be accepted, he said he would be ready to start within an hour.

During the pleasant hours of the afternoon of July second, they crossed the bay on the Golden Gate Ferry, went briskly through Sausalito, Corte Madera, Larkspur, Ross, San Anselmo, San Rafael, like thousands of others, seeking change of air and scenery.

At Corte Madera the writer thought, once more of the versatile Henry Clay Hall, whose friendly association had been of such benefit to him for many years. If he were alive today how he would revel in the prospects of Al Smith's campaign and election, but he is gone and the pleasure is forever missing.

Ross always presents for more than a passing thought, the picture of J. L. Brown, who applauds every literary effort from the rambler. He lives to rejoice in the great events of the present. May he be spared long years to come.

Along the road you see the invitation, here and there, "Live where you play in beautiful Marin." It is presumed all of us would comply if other ties were not so binding, for the climate and the scenery are wonderfully fine and impel everyone to pay tribute, involuntarily.

With all its charms, the fine highway, being improved now, leads us out of Marin county and rich and productive Sonoma county offers her wealth of chickens, hay and grain, and fruits of every description, to please the visitor, while a perfect automobile road urges him to speed onward.

As we drive through Petaluma, Santa Rosa, and Healdsburg, and several other places, we can not help but think how generously our state has been favored with the great blessings, desired so much. Wherever you journey in the state, the feeling is the same. Various states can justly boast of numerous distinctions, but our state has all of them, not even one missing.

We know as we drive on through Cloverdale that Pop McCray's is just over the hill and, if time would permit, what substantial entertainment would be at our disposal for the night, but regretfully we hurry on our way, entering ere long a more rugged country, the eastern part of Mendocino county, where, here and there, the sight of a sheep, looking very diminutive, being minus its fleece, indicates the industry of the locality. The land seems to be light but in nearly all places it has a good covering of dry grass and the sheep seem to be contented but intent upon seeking the food they prefer. Cleared, cultivated spots have flowers in profusion and fruit trees, healthy looking and well laden, being evidence that the soil is productive.

Before supper-time the gateway and the sign Duncan Springs arrests attention, causing the highway to be forsaken. For about half a mile, by a winding road, the Buick bravely makes the ascent to the hotel, while one of the occupants thinks of what John Mein of Lobitas was wont to say to the young farmer when he was giving them lessons in driving a motor, "An automobile has power and will go anywhere, but, remember it has no eyes."

At the Springs the welcome was real. In the parking space the machine which had been so active instantly became silent, as if it had fallen asleep, in its tracks.

The occupants were ushered into the spacious dining room, where all were very busy, with unchecked appetites, doing full justice to the excellent foods placed before them by graceful, high school girl waitresses.

The writer and his friend could not help but feel that the resorts are conferring a public blessing when they thus give employment to ambitious and industrious young women who are willing to relieve their parents of a part of the financial burden of their education. Besides earning a summer stake they have the benefits of a country outing and no end of interesting incidents.

Young ladies, fair to look upon and accomplished, are preferred, for when the tables are cleared the immaculate dining room costumes are laid aside and the girls in their pretty dresses appear in the dancing pavilion from eight until ten o'clock, and they know how to make themselves quite entertaining. At Duncan Springs all were interesting and good dancers and one of them did sing very sweetly, meriting generous applause.

It is not such an easy life to wait on the guests, three times a day, to keep the tables, chairs and diningroom absolutely inviting, and entertain for two hours every evening, still such experience is highly creditable and those who can go through it, unscathed, become real leaders in business and social life. One young lady, who is a teacher, having paid her own way while going through the Teachers' College, said that she made more than $240 during one summer at a resort.

Sometimes the mother goes along with her daughters to a resort, and together they have a happy and lucrative vacation, returning to their home healthier and richer when the season is over. This way saves a bit of worrying for the mother. At Duncan Springs this year there was one mother, with two daughters, who was thus getting a lot of pleasure and a little profit, too. She was proud to say she had Scottish blood in her.

Mr. and Mrs. Howell, the managers of the Springs, are fully as considerate of their girls as they are of their guests, and such is the rule at every other resort.

Duncan Springs was found to be well partonized, as it should be on account of its offerings for health restoring and genuine rest.

The magnesia and the soda water were partaken of freely and had their salutary effect upon the general system. Charley Thorn presided over the bath-house, where all guests, in their turns were accommodated with the luxury of heated soda water. This most perfect bath is a feature of this resort only, and it is so efficacious that it should be widely advertised. No one can indulge in it without feeling, immediately, its wonderful beneficial results. One of them, any hour of the day, makes a person think of the famous baths of ancient times in Rome or Egypt, in which the illus-

SOME ODDS AND ENDS OF THE WEEK'S NEWS

Revised plans for a sewer system in the San Bruno and Lomita Park districts were discussed at the last regular meeting of the San Bruno city council. The estimated cost of the system has been placed at $75,000.

The assessed valuation of the city of San Mateo next year will be close to $11,250,000, according to figures being compiled in the city clerk's office.

Joseph J. Dowling, aged 80, veteran actor, died last Sunday at his home in Hollywood. Dowling, who passed his life on the stage and before the motion picture camera, was the original "Miracle Man" in the film play of that name.

A campaign for greater protection at the Broadway railway and street car crossing and at the approaches to the Burlingame high school was started Monday by the Burlingame Chamber of Commerce, following the death of two persons at the dangerous Broadway crossing Sunday night.

Palo Alto is preparing extensively for her distinguished citizen, Herbert Hoover, who is expected home within the next few weeks. Committees to handle details of Hoover's reception have been announced.

Officers are endeavoring to establish the identity of a man found dead last Sunday on Belle Air Isle, near Mills field. The body was discovered by two San Bruno boys.

If one of the proposed links connecting the Junipero Serra boulevard with El Camino Real will terminate at Millbrae, instead of Holy Cross cemetery, San Mateo county may pay 15 per cent of the estimated cost, according to a statement said to have been made by Supervisor Hickey at the meeting of the board of supervisors in Redwood City.

The Palo Alto school of aviation is a "nuisance" to several residents of that city, and war has been declared against the private institution by citizens living in the College Terrace and South Palo Alto.

Frederick Stymetz Lamb, internationally known artist and city planner, died at Fort Bragg last Monday after a brief illness. He was stricken on Saturday while at his summer home on Noyo river with his son.

An all night vigil by relatives at the beach at Santa Barbara, inspired by the belief that the body of a drowned person would rise on the ninth day, was rewarded by the recovery of the body of Wolsey Weyant, Los Angeles police officer.

Preference will be given World war veterans in the homesteading of some 106,300 acres of land in Idaho, Montana, Utah and Wyoming, announced by the Department of the Interior as open for settlement. For three months, beginning August 1, surveyed lands in the four states will be open under the homestead and desert land laws to former service men or persons having a prior claim, and after November to the general public.

Mills Field executives are making preparations for the expected arrival this Saturday afternoon of twenty-four airplanes scheduled to land at the airport enroute south on the national air tour for the annual Edsel B. Ford reliability trophy.

Two unmasked men entered the store of Joe Mendoza, Walnut Grove, held up the three patrons, shot Davis Siva through the neck and escaped with $130. Mendoza, in a rear room at the time, entered when he heard the shot, only to be covered by the gun of one of the robbers, who made their escape.

BOARD OPPOSES OPENING OF HETCH HETCHY TO PUBLIC

To prevent pollution of San Mateo county's future water supply, the county board of supervisors, in session last Monday at Redwood City, passed a resolution opposing the proposed opening to the public of the Hetch Hetchy territory. Supervisor Thomas Hickey presented the resolution.

Stephen T. Mather, superintendent of the Yosemite valley, recently proposed the opening of the streams and surrounding territory of Hetch Hetchy to the public for camping, fishing, swimming, boating, etc.

Supervisor Hickey went to San Francisco following the meeting of the board to ask the supervisors of that county to pass a similar resolution. Santa Clara county has gone on record as opposing such a move by the national park officials.

THOMPSON FINALLY GIVES UP QUEST FOR BRIDGE FRANCHISE

Because of alleged prior rights held by Attorney Albert Mansfield, of Redwood City, Robert W. Thompson appeared before the San Mateo county board of supervisors last Monday and requested the withdrawal of his application for a bridge from Candlestick point to Alameda county. His request was granted.

Thompson told the boadr that he understood that Mansifeld had purchased the property at Candlestick point where the former proposed to construct the San Mateo county approach. Under the law, according to Thompson, the property owner has the first right to apply for a franchise to build a bridge on his own land.

Thompson declared that he would probably present another application in the near future, if another location can be found, or if he finds that Mansfield has not purchased the property in question.

This action marked the temporary finish of the Thompson application that has been before the board at various times since last August. Thompson's application has been published as a legal advertisement at two different periods in newspapers of this county.

The rates set forth in a communication from the newly formed $40,000 Ravenswood water district were accepted by the county board of supervisors.

The matter of a special tax to raise $3,800 for the creation of a fire department in Half Moon Bay was referred to the county auditor. The board of fire commissioners of the district asked for $2,000 for the purchase of apparatus and $1,800 for the maintenance of the department.

Edmund Scott, assistant district attorney, informed the board that the Ravenswood school district voted a $20,000 bond issue a year ago, but that the law allows only an $18,000 issue. The report was eccepted.

Lorraine and Hazel Larrecou filed with the board a release from responsibility for the death of the late Deputy Sheriff Pierre Larrecou. The release stated that the heirs had received $5,000 from the county.

DALY CITY METHODIST CHURCH

"Can Al Smith be President? What are some of the qualifications for President?" These are but a few of the questions that will be discussed by the pastor at the Sunday evening service at the Daly City Methodist church. A full house is expected. Come early and get a good seat. Don't forget the hour, 8 o'clock.

Sunday school is holding its own, even though folks are away on their vacation. We invite you to come and enjoy the fellowship of the school.

The Wolf Cubs will begin their regular meetings again this Friday at 3 o'clock. All the members of the Wolf Cub are invited to attend. Please tell others about it. Let us make this a real live organization.

This article appeared in the Fresno Christian Church Bulletin. It is worth reading:

The Parable of the Vacationists

Now it came to pass as summer drew nigh that Mr. Church Goer lifted up his eyes unto the hills and said:

"Lo, the hot days cometh and even now are at hand. Come, let us go unto the heights, where cool breezes refresh us and glorious scenes await."

"Thou speakest wisely," quoth Mrs. Church Goer. "Yet three, yea four, things must we do before we go."

"Three things I can think of, but not four," responded Mr. Church Goer. "We must arrange for our flowers to be cared for, our chickens fed, and the mail forwarded, but the fourth eludes my mind."

"The fourth is like unto the first three, yet more inmportant than all. Thou shalt dig down into thy purse and pay thy church pledge, that the good name of the church be preserved and that it may be well with thee, for verily I say unto thee, thou hast more more money than you will have when thou dost return."

And it came to pass that Mr. Church Goer paid his pledge for the summer, and the Treasurer rejoiced greatly, saying, "Of a truth there are those who care for the Lord's work." And it was so.

ELLIOTT L. FISHER, Pastor.

"Wild Man of Mountains" Captured

Jim Brown, the "wild man of the mountains," who led Tulare county officers, forest rangers and cattlemen a hectic chase through the rugged fastnesses of the High Sierra country for four days, is lodged in the county jail at Visalia. He faces either examination as to his sanity or arraignment on fire and burglary charges.

HOW SOFT-HEARTED JURORS ENCOURAGE RECKLESSNESS

One Charles Murray, of Eugene, Oregon, was arrested on a charge of driving an automobile while intoxicated. At his trial the jury could not agree. He was discharged. A few weeks later his car collided with another one, leaped onto a sidewalk, struck two pedestrians, and crushed one of them to death. Murray, according to the testimony, abandoned his car and fled to his home. There he was arrested on a manslaughter charge. It was alleged that once again he had been driving while intoxicated.

Who is to blame for the death of the innocent pedestrian? At least a part of the responsibility lies on the shoulders of the soft-headed jury that turned him loose on the first charge. The peace officers and the prosecutor did their duty; the jurymen shirked theirs. The reckless driver was confirmed in the idea that he could get away with it. Too many of them do get away with it. Here's hoping that the reckless driver will be forced to support the families of those he kills.—Sunset Magazine.

Miss Edith Graham, of St. Louis, was so intent on a cross-word puzzle that she didn't know her home was burning, and was rescued with difficulty.

Mark Rayden, of Chicago, held two policemen at bay with a toy pistol for an hour and then surrendered.

THROUGH AT THIRTY—OR JUST ARRIVING AT SIXTY?

Are young heads or old heads the better?

Should there be more young presidents, since the president of one of the fastest growing automotive firms is merely thirty-five? Or should the premium be reserved for the older man?

The long service man usually receives a premium in greater remuneration for the same job a younger man performs, but it does not follow that older hands should be sought for filling vacancies.

Insulin was discovered by Frederick Banting when he was thirty-one; Darwin's theories were worked out before he was thirty; the use of ether was developed by William Morton when he was twenty-seven; the red blood corpuscles were observed by Jan Swannerdam at the age of twenty-one.

Benjamin Franklin was of most service to his country after he had passed three score years; the iron hand of Bismarck held Germany when he was eighty-four; Cervantes was nearly seventy before he wrote Don Quixote.

Neither age nor youth is a virtue. Many old men have not profited by their years of experience. Many young men are old fogies before they pass the quarter century mark.

The race of accomplishment and worth goes not to young heads or old heads, but to good heads that are used.—Donald A. Laird in Forbes Magazine.

THE RETURN of ANTHONY TRENT

By WYNDHAM MARTYN

Copyright by Barse & Hopkins WNU Service

STORY FROM THE START

Anthony Trent, once master criminal, now reformed, returns to New York after four years' absence. He learns his friend, Capt. Frank Sutton, is in Sing Sing. Trent is surprised to find his New York apartment occupied by a stranger, Campbell Sutton, who represents himself as the brother of Frank Sutton. Trent is asked by Campbell to force a confession from Payson Grant, whom he accuses of having crookedly obtained all of Frank Sutton's property and then married the latter's wife. Trent starts on a campaign to accomplish the downfall of Grant. He learns that Captain Sutton has escaped from Sing Sing and later, to his surprise, finds that Campbell is really Frank Sutton. Trent takes his place in society as the opening gun of his campaign against Grant. He becomes a house guest of the Grants. Trent discovers in Mademoiselle Dupin, Natica's French instructor, a friend of the old criminal days. She is now going straight.

Payson Grant, dancing with Kathryn Holland, smiled jovially as he passed and repassed. Already Payson was filled with the courage guarded by a green revenue stamp. Natica was troubled by his new habits. They made him look older; he grew coarser. She had told him not an hour ago that he was drinking himself to death. The trouble with that sort of dissolution was that it lingered unduly and was not picturesque. Payson would probably develop into a flabby and fleshy old man.

Conscious that she had been silent for a long time and that Anthony Trent was looking about him curiously, Mrs. Grant, with whom he was dancing, became sprightly and conversational.

"These are not the sort of people who interest you," she said. "I wanted you to come when some very charming friends are visiting us. You must have thought Mr. Gimbert was terribly inquisitive at dinner."

"I like curiosity in others," Trent said. "It's the most self-revealing quality there is. Mr. Gimbert, for instance, gave me the impression of being a sort of amateur detective. Or perhaps he's one of the professionals?"

He did not take his eyes from her as he said this. If she lied he would know it.

"Unhappily he is Payson's godfather," she laughed, "and has to be humored on that account. Most of these people are the sort of old friends who assume they are welcome because they have known Payson or me before we were too old to resent them. A dreadful amount of nonsense is talked about old friends. Just look at this man coming in."

The new guest interested Trent. He had that square, aggressive carriage which is seen most often on those who have served their country on the police force. He moved with a ponderous solidity, and yet his furtive, dark eyes and nervous hands contradicted the impression his figure and walk gave the observer. His clothes were not of a fashionable cut.

"Another old friend?" Trent asked lightly.

"Simply a business acquaintance," she returned. When the music ceased, Payson Grant introduced the stranger as Mr. Yeatman, an accountant, who had come to help him over some South American business. As he said it Trent noticed that Natica Grant frowned. Mr. Yeatman, despite his Anglo-Saxon name, had a curious vocal inflection that puzzled Trent. It seemed almost certain that the language he used was not that to which he had been bred.

Trent felt almost certain that the furtive Yeatman was an operative from an agency. For himself he experienced no fear. His finger-prints or Bertillon measurements were in no official bureaus. It was for the "countess" he was anxious.

If the stranger were, indeed, a detective he would probably begin with the servants; and the presence of an alien, like Mademoiselle Dupin, would seem worthy of investigation. Trent could picture her being put through a brusque examination. Her references would be looked into and she would be invited to explain by what channels she entered the United States, the dates of arrival and all those particulars which would damn her in official eyes.

Presently the distinguished accountant was introduced to Anthony Trent. Trent was not acquainted with the conversational methods of accountants, but he did not think Yeatman a credit to that accurate body. "I should hardly have taken you for a commercial man," Trent said.

There was no mistaking the sudden interest Yeatman had for the speaker. Suspicion was on his face for a moment. Then he assumed a bluff heartiness.

"I'm not here on business tonight," he said. "Tomorrow I shall attend to that—tomorrow."

When the house party had broken up and Trent had retired to his rooms, there came a knock upon the door, and old Gimbert entered. There was something of a child in the old man. He was hardly able to conceal his triumph.

"They can't fool me," he began. "They forget I was a ranger once and an old Indian fighter. They couldn't keep it from me. That fellow, who don't know as much as I do about double-entry, is a detective. Natica got him here so that gang operating along the coast wouldn't get a chance. She says there's a million dollars represented in jewels at the dinner-table. This fellow Yeatman had planned to be introduced as an architect going to make alterations. He'd been reading it up in a book and could have gotten by. What does Payson do but forget and call him an accountant. No wonder I got him all tangled up in figures."

She Had Told Him Not an Hour Ago That He Was Drinking Himself to Death.

"I suppose he has his suspicions already?" Trent hazarded.

"Sure," said Gimbert. "He saw he couldn't put anything over on me. He says the Spring Lake robberies were all inside jobs. He was asking Natica what she knew about the butler and his two deputies." Gimbert's eyes sparkled. "I've always wanted to be in one of those swell house-party robberies. This place ought to be a magnet. If you were one of those society crooks wouldn't you try to get an invite here?"

"It would be an ideal place," Trent conceded.

"You understand," Gimbert warned him as he went to the door, "that it is all private what I've told you?"

"Naturally," Trent returned. "Good-night."

Things looked very dark for Mademoiselle Dupin. For all Trent knew, she might have been traced here. In that case, nothing could save her. He determined to use Thorpe as a messenger early on the morrow. At least, she must be warned.

The admirable butler, came unbidden, next morning to know what Mr. Trent desired for breakfast, and whether he would go downstairs or have it served in his room. Thorpe had found in the American one he might serve and still keep his self-respect.

"I'll go down," Trent said. "By the way," he added, "I want this note taken to Mademoiselle Dupin."

It was written in French. She was distressed when she read it.

"Be very careful," the note ran. "There is a detective here calling himself Yeatman and pretending to be a business friend of Mr. Grant. I must see you. Tell bearer at what hour you can come to me."

Mademoiselle Dupin turned to the waiting Thorpse.

"I will discuss the matter with Mr. Trent at ten o'clock."

The butler left her firm in the conviction that some monetary consideration was the cause of these conversations. Gentlemen of leisure, as he knew, would be indiscreet.

Mademoiselle Dupin entered Trent's sitting room at ten. Although she looked worried, there was an absence of the black despair which, the previous day, had had her in its grip.

"In twenty minutes," she said, "I have to give Mrs. Grant a lesson. Your letter alarmed me very much."

"I only meant it to put you on your guard," he answered. "There may be no danger of your being recognized."

"There is always danger," she said somberly. "How shall I recognize him? There are so many strangers in the house."

"He's about five feet nine inches high and chunky enough to weigh two hundred pounds. Coloring dark. Gray-black hair and full lips partly hidden by a mustache. Uneven teeth. The left ear is a quarter inch lower than the right. He carries himself erect and squarely. His age is probably forty. The impression he gives is one of great irritability of temper. He has many little nervous habits which, somehow, are not in keeping with his rugged, solid, policeman-like frame."

"You must have watched him keenly," she said.

"I did so because he was scrutinizing me and asking my host questions. I looked so closely because he was one of the few men I have disliked on sight."

There was a look of acute distress on her face.

"You can't mean you think he may have come for you?"

Her concern for his safety provoked a strange gratification.

"I don't think so; but that may mean nothing. Think of my life, Mademoiselle. I have taken what I wanted and played my wits against the police, and I have always won. The odds always turn. It may be I take too much comfort in thinking that because I have quit the game I shall be secure."

"You have the air of one who has yet a great destiny," she said. "I do not see you coming to an unhappy fate." She looked at the clock. "My time is up."

"But you need not go without seeing Yeatman," Trent said. "He is in the garden now, looking up here apparently."

From a table drawer Trent took a pair of powerful binoculars and handed them to the "Countess."

"He has turned his back to me," she commented. "Yes, he stands square and menacing like a policeman. I shall not meet this gentleman if I can help it." She put the glasses down. "You will not think me cowardly when I confess that something here oppresses me." She put her hands to her heart. "I cannot refuse to see him without making him suspicious."

Natica Grant used to talk of the doings of the day to Mademoiselle Dupin in the French tongue. It was her desire to become fluent in as short a time as possible and to capture as wide a vocabulary as she could.

It was not reassuring to mademoiselle that her employer started her morning exercise with a discussion of crime, and the enormous value of the jewels beneath her roof.

It was an opportunity to get nearer to what was the object of the man. Trent, who should know, thought it a curious thing that a detective should be asked to come to a house party where there were no more than a score of guests.

Mrs. Grant smiled when mademoiselle expressed these ideas.

And It Really Seemed Such a Nice Scandal

A conversation between two women, one of whom was hard of hearing, interested the passengers of a Glenwood avenue car.

"I saw her on a street downtown with a man."

"Is that so?"

"Yes, and it was after ten o'clock, too."

"The very idea."

"I never suspected her of flirting before."

"No, nor me, either."

"But you never can tell."

"Ain't it the truth?"

"It is that."

"Do you know her husband?"

"No, I ain't never seen him close."

"Well, he is a big, fat man."

"Does he wear a brown suit?"

"Yes."

"Glasses?"

"Yes."

"Smoke a pipe?"

"Uh, huh!"

There was deepest disappointment in the woman's voice as she exclaimed:

"Fiddlesticks! Then it was only her husband after all."—Youngstown Telegram.

Aquarium Cement

Cement for panes in aquariums is produced from litharge and glycerin. The former must be as finely powdered as possible and the glycerin very condensed, of a sirupy consistency and limpid. Mix the two ingredients into a semi-liquid paste, coat the places, or pour the tough mass into the respective cavity, and press into it the part to be cemented on. The surplus oozing out must be removed at once and the place cleaned, as the putty hardens very rapidly.

Adrift With Humor

PRESENT TIME

A certain movie star over on the lot has been pestered to death for quite some time by an influential admirer, one of those chaps who's too important to be barred off the lot and who has to be kidded along.

The other day, doing his best to please, he tried to wheedle out of the cold beauty the day of her birth.

"Oh, any time that is most convenient for you," she yawned.—Los Angeles Times.

Too Late

The newly married, beautiful-but-dumb young thing dashed into the house in the greatest of anguish.

"Oh, Hector," she wailed, "I've just been bitten by a dog!"

"There, there, darling," soothed the brand-new husband, "don't you worry. Just you go and put some peroxide on it."

"Bu-but I-I can't," she sobbed. "It-it's run away!"

EYES DON'T SHOW WIT

"Do you think girls eyes show what kind of wit they have?"

"No, their eyes are sparkling most of the time."

Happy Thought

"What are the seven men doing in your outer office?"

"I advertised for an efficiency expert."

"How you gonna pick him out?"

"I figured the most efficient would find some way of getting rid of the other six."

Her Preference

He—Do you care for dancing?

She—No.

"Why not?"

"It's mere hugging set to music."

"Well, what is there about that you don't like?"

"The music."

Ha! Ha!

He—Will you marry me?

She—No, but thank you.

He (bitterly)—Why thank me?

She—The doctor advised me to laugh heartily at least once a day.

Book Clerk—Yeah—(yawn)—we've got one. Look around and maybe you'll see it. I haven't read it myself.

Customer—I should say you haven't.

Striking Coincidence

"My name is Gadgett—and yours?"

"Jones."

"H'mmm, I knew a fellow in my old home town by that name."

Literature

A novelist was chatting with his publisher. "By the way, where did you get the plot of your second novel?" asked the latter.

"From the film version of the first," was the reply.

All Over

Lady of the House (hears the sound of crockery crashing on the kitchen floor)—Lena! What are you doing?

Lena—Nothing, ma'am; it's done.

Chinese and Indians Alive to Food Values

Any custom that has held its own for generations usually has something back of it, no matter how little it appears to be supported by modern science, in the opinion of Hugh S. Cumming, surgeon general of the United States Public Health service.

"For a thousand years," he says, "the Chinese have prescribed the heads of powdered toad fish as a remedy for heart trouble, and now adrelin, the most up-to-date drug for the treatment of heart disease, has been found to exist in the head glands of that fish.

"For generations the fact that American Indian hunters always chose the liver and the white men the meat when the animals they had trapped or killed were divided was quoted as proof of their ignorance and primitive development.

"Yet in the last five years the great nutritive value of liver has come to be recognized and it is prescribed in cases of anemia."

Obedient to Command "Order in the Court"

Patrons of a Los Angeles theater, seated behind a young woman who mislaid her purse one evening recently, missed a part of the photography, because the woman stood up to conduct her search for the lost article, but then enjoyed a little unintentional comedy which others missed.

It was during a court scene put on by the Vitaphone, and the court was hearing parties in a separate support action. Those seated behind the young woman were getting fidgety, when the judge rapped his gavel, and ordered, "Order in the court, sit down!"

The woman was so surprised that she sank back into her seat, and there she discovered the missing purse, where it had fallen.

Youthful Composer

Erwin Dressel, age eighteen, is probably the youngest contemporaneous composer to have an opera accepted for production by a large opera house. His opera, entitled "Poor Columbus," will soon be brought out by the Prussian state opera at Cassel. Dressel is orchestra conductor at the municipal theater of Hanover. He first attracted nation-wide attention when, at the age of only fourteen, he composed the incidental music to Shakespeare's "As You Like It" for the state theater at Berlin.

Opossum in Stone

In keeping with the provision that various forms of animal and plant life found within the area be used for decoration motifs on the Cathedral of SS. Paul and Peter, in Washington, an opossum is to have its likeness carved into the great structure now under way. The animal was captured on the cathedral grounds and was posed for a sculptor, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. When finished, the building will constitute a stone record of the animal, bird, insect and flower life of the neighborhood.

Costa Rican Education

The minister of public instruction of Costa Rica says that Costa Rica has no standing army, but has more teachers than policemen, and more educational employees than in any other branch of the government. Education is compulsory between the ages of seven and fourteen, with at least two years of English after the fifth grade. Five years of study is required for bachelor degrees, and there are universities for those desiring higher education.

Lost Radium in Clinkers

Thrown by mistake into a dust bin and then into an incinerator, radium worth $400 was recovered at St. Thomas' hospital, London, by scientific examination of the clinkers taken from the incinerator. When the loss was noticed, the radiologist suggested that the ashes be searched, because radium will not burn.

Insect Pests

Insect pests are still advancing against the forces of science. The cotton crop losses from the boll-weevil in 1927, a year of exceptionally favorable weather, were about 1,487,000 bales, representing a loss of $148,700,400. The corn borer, too, has advanced to the northern limit of corn growing, now infesting over 95,650 square miles of Canadian territory.

When We Two Parted

England is becoming interested in the American method of raising chicks by wholesale and sending them by parcel post to poultry farms. WILL WORK FOR HOOVER

It seems now that August 11 will be the date set upon which Herbert Hoover will be officially notified of his selection as the Republican candidate for President of the United States.

Having tendered his resignation as Secretary of Commerce, Hoover is making preparations to return to his home in Palo Alto, where the official notification will reach him. It is understood that Senator Curtis, Republican candidate for Vice-President, will receive his official notification at Topeka, Kansas.

According to press dispatches, both the Anti-Saloon League of America and the Women's Christian Temperance Union, the two outstanding prohibition organizations of the nation, will work to bring about the election of Herbert Hoover.

With these two organizations on the firing line, it now seems definitely assured that the "dry" issue, or, as they term it, the issue of "constitutional government," will bo one of the dominant factors of the campaign.

Dr. W. F. BcBride, general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, is quoted as saying: "The fundamental issue of prohibition is not at stake in this election. The issue is not wet or dry. The issue is constitutional government. No matter what Governor Smith says about law enforcement, there is his wet record in New York, his nullification record, and his statement to the Houston convention. The Anti-Saloon League has not formally endorsed the candidacy of Secretary Hoover, and I am not sure that it will. That will not be necessary. As a candidate he is entirely satsifactory."

CHAMPION BOY ORATOR

Small town boys and girls who may be inclined to fear competition with those trained in city schools should be encouraged by the success of James R. Moore, 17-year-old schoolboy of Somerset, Kentucky, who recently won the championship in the fifth national oratorical contest held in Washington.

The pick of all the high schools in the country, including those of New York City, Chicago anad other metropolitan centers, went down to defeat before this able Kentucky lad, who in the final contest received the unanimous vote of four members of the United States Supreme Court who served as judges.

The national contest orations this year were, as usual, based on the Constitution of the United States, and a total of more than a million school boys and girls competed in local, state and national contests, from which young Moore finally emerged as the first prize winner.

In many other important prize contests town and country boys and girls have shown superiority over their city competitors, and none should hesitate to try for prizes merely because they happen to live in small communities. It is what they can do, and not where they are from, that counts.

LABOR CREATES INTANGIBLE VALUES

There are creations and productions that require labor and raw materials and give the world new values and services that virtually can be called manufactured products and yet do not consist of tangibles.

Take the labor and capital that enters into a great symphony, or a play, a newspaper, or an excursion by land or sea, a great labor that creates values in manufacturing joys and pleasures on a large scale.

The pay rolls involved, time and energy employed, put such works and organizing and producing into the class of factory products, certainly for the same reason that newspapers are classed as manufactured products.

Sometimes thoughtless persons sneer at considering such creators of wealth and pay rolls as belonging to the toilers and the pay roll classes.

POOR ROADS EXPENSIVE

Recently conducted experiments show that bad roads cost the motorist the equivalent of a tax of 22.3 cents on every gallon of gasoline used. This figure is reached by the assumption that a car makes 10 miles to the gallon on poor roads.

On a basis of a speed of 33 miles per hour, tests in several states showed the cost of gasoline and tires per thousand miles over a rough road used in experiments, was $35.10 for an average four-cylinder car loaded. The cost for the same car running at the same speed over a smooth highway was shown to be only $12.80.

What better argument can there be for improving highways as fast as funds can be made available? Better highways not only mean less expense to the motorist, but more profits for the business man.

It seems that Muscle Shoals was intended to produce munitions in time of war and fertilizer talk in time of peace.

NEW PEACE TREATIES

Terms of the new peace treaties which are sought to be made between fifteen or more lading powers through the initiative of Secretary of State Kellogg of the United States are short and to the point. The entire agreement is contained in these few words:

"The high contracting parties solemnly declare in the names of their respective peoples that they condemn recourse to war and renounce it as an instrument of national policy in their relations with one another. They agree that the setlement of all disputes of whatever nature or of whatever origin which may arise between them shall never be sought except by pacific means."

So far as the actual agreement is concerned, that is all. Yet in these two short sentences are contained pledges which, if faithfully kept, would banish war from a great portion of the earth. It is also provided that other nations may join in these pledges at any time.

While it is perhaps too much to hope that war can be entirely abolished, these treaties, to which the United States, Great Britain, Germany, France, Italy, Japan and nine other nations have already given informal consent, if actually signed will mark the greatest practical step in the interest of peace ever taken since the dawn of civilization.

IDEAS ABOUT FOOD

Popular ideas about food are a strange mixture of truth and fiction, according to a recent article by Dr. Lieb, an authority on diet. Particularly is this the case with respect to notions of what is good for people, or not good for them, under varying circumstances..

For example, bananas and nuts were long thought to be hard to digest, but if the bananas are ripe and the nuts are chewed sufficiently, they are among the most easily digestible of foods.

The prejudice against raw foods is also unwarranted, it is said. Raw corn, wheat and other starches in moderate amounts are completely digested, while raw potatoes are 78 per cent digestible. The craving of some children for raw potatoes may be indulged to a reasonable extent without harm, and the same is true of raw cabbage and lettuce.

Drinking water during meals was long thought to be harmful to the digestion, but for normal persons it is now declared to be beneficial if sipped between swallows of solid food.

Forcing children to eat spinach or other foods which they do not like is not good for them, as the feeling of repulsion which they experience may hinder digestion.

While the doctor does not say so in as many words, it appears that a safer rule of diet is to eat what one likes, provided it does not produce any disagreeable after effects. And, regardless of advice, that is what most of us insist on doing anyway.

ESKIMO GRADUATES

The spread of education is illustrated by the fact that four Eskimo students were graduated on June 30 from an American school at White Mountain, in Northwestern Alaska, where fifty-four boarding pupils, drawn from a wide radius, attended during the past year. Instruction including the eighth grade is given, combined with practical courses on Alaskan industries.

The four graduates are Isaac and Jennie Newlin, a young married couple, Josephine Kaparak and Roger Mendelock. A unique feature of the presentation of the diplomas was the commencement address, prepared by John J. Tigert, United States Commissioner of Education, and transmitted to White Mountain by radio.

Two other similar schools are in operation in Alaska under American auspices, and it is said that the native young people of that remote region are generally eager to obtain an education and learn the ways of the outside world. It is gratifying to know that the government is providing them with means to that end.

TRIBUTE TO BENNETT

It was a most graceful act on the part of Commander Byrd that he named his Antarctic enterprise the Floyd Bennett Antarctic Expedition and christened his leading airplane the Floyd Bennett.

Bennett was the pilot of Byrd's plane, the Josephine Ford, on the first aircraft flight over the North Pole. He died a few weeks ago of pneumonia, contracted while trying to relieve the crew of the Bremen, stranded on Greenly Island.

As a recent writer has said: "He died as he had lived, a true gentleman and a courageous man, whose life was devoted to the cause of aviation; one whose loyalty to his kind stood high within him."

Bennett did not live to accompany Byrd to the Antarctic, as both had hoped, but the memory of his dauntless spirit will accompany the expedition to the Far South, inspiring its members to further deeds of courage.

A CONTRIBUTION TO INTERNATIONAL LIFE

A news item dated at Johannesburg says that "an American tractor of the crawler type sold itself to South African road builders during a demonstration here recently by drawing a scarifier which plowed road surfaces to a depth of 16 inches. Its speed and effectiveness impressed municipal officers."

American labor-saving and efficiency increasing machines and methods are penetrating to all parts of the world, whether it be South Africa, China or the Argentine. This is one of America's greatest contributions to international life.

Political writers have almost completed Hoover's cabinet, which will save that busy man a lot of time when he is elected.

With the conventions over, the next big political event will be the Literary Digest's straw vote.

Little Billie Martinelli, only son of Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Martinelli, has been seriously ill with stomach trouble and is at the San Mateo hospital. Latest reports are that he is doing nicely and is expected to be home soon.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Callan left the first part of the week for the southern part of the state, where they will visit in Los Angeles, San Diego, Mexico and all points of interest thereabout. While in the south they will visit George Krehl, who is spending his vacation at San Diego.

Mr. and Mrs. Flanagin, nee Billie Dorothy, and Miss Frances Flanagin, the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Flanagin, departed last Tuesday evening for a several months trip to Ireland. They intend to spend some time back East before they make their departure for the old country. Their many friends wish them a successful trip.

LA FIESTA SOCIAL CLUB

The next regular meeting of La Fiesta Social Club, which is held every two weeks, will be held at the home of Miss Edna Boyle, on Brunswick street, Friday evening, July 13, at which time several new candidates will be initiated.

The last regular meeting was held at the home of Lorraine Wall, on Belmont avenue. Miss Audrey Diamond acted as hostess with Mrs. Wall. After the regular business meeting a delightful supper was served by the hostesses. Those who had a most enjoyable evening were: Sarah Battaini, Colista Dalton, Tessie O'Connor, Marge Kennedy, Flossie McKendrick, Marge O'Connor, Laura Figoni, Edna Boyle, Sylvia Fischer, Annette Lucey, Elsie Fahy, Christine Hume, Audrey Diamond and Lorraine Wall.

rious characters of that period sought reinvigoration, after nerve-racking encounters or long spells of reckless carousing.

Your writer found, after climbing Mt. Duncan, to put up the flag for the Fourth, that a hot soda water bath drove away every feeling of exhaustion and restored the glow of desire to keep on doing things. However, you must experience in order to realize.

Still better evidence of the youth-continuing power of the magnesia and the soda water of this resort is the presence of a couple of octogenarians, to be seen playing a good game of shuffle-board, hiking along the pleasant pathways with firm step, or eating three hearty meals a day while maintaining animated argument on live topics of the day. These old yet young fellows, for a score of years, have never failed to spend at least a fortnight annually at Duncan Springs, partaking of its charms.

Every evening at the Spring House there is dancing for young and old. Henry Ford's idea of resurrecting dances of many years ago prevails to a great extent. Even the Virginia reel and the lancers-quadrille are gone through, quite frequently, with unfeigned enthusiasm. Also, the newest steps of the latest creations of dancing msaters are beautifully exemplified by modern votaries.

On the night of the Fourth there was a special program consisting of a masquerade in impromptu, homemade, laugh provoking costumes; followed by singing, mostly by Mr. Peters, a grand entertainer; recitations by Miss Howell; and the writer was introduced as a speaker and was applauded for his Fourth of July speech.

Such is the life of the resorts. All of them are good, and whoever can afford the time and slight expense should take advantage of them. It costs less to take a fortnight's rest than pay the doctor and hospital for a spell of sickness. A rest at the Springs is a preventative. Go before you are too run down to be able to build up. You have read before, "Prevention is better than cure."

Another bit of information—each resort endeavors to outdo all of its competitors. As a consequence the tables are well provided for, the attention is considerate and prompt, and the sleeping apartments make you forget you are away from home. The comfort is so great, the companionship so congenial, the change of scenery and climate so cheering, and the entire relief from responsibilities so delightful that the time to return comes all too soon and is like the abrupt ending of a romantic dream.

The return trip was made by way of Ukiah, Blue Lakes, Lakeport, Adams Springs, Middletown, the Geysers at Calistoga, over the mountains to Santa Rosa, and back to the Golden Gate Ferry.

At Adams Springs, Mr. J. Dowd and his daughter, Miss Marie Dowd, came forth to extend a welcome and urge a drink of the water that has made Lake county famous.

The final thought is Mr. Joscelyn's. He said: "I did not know what a trip to the Springs meant, before. This has been my first real outing in twenty years, and I never felt better. When I get home I'll make things move for awhile."

SAFETY GATE AT DANGEROUS CROSSING URGED BY JURORS

Safety gates for the dangerous Broadway railway crossing at Burlingame were recommended by the coroner's jury which heard testimony at the inquest held into the deaths of Miss Nolia Bratten, San Francisco stenographer, and Milton T. Gill, Oakland engineer, who were killed on Sunday night when a train hit an automobile in which they were riding. A verdict of accidental death was brought in with the safety gate recommendation. The railroad company was completely exonerated of all blame in the death of the two persons.

NEWSPAPER INCREASED IN SIZE

The Half Moon Bay Review, published by George E. Dunn, last week appeared as a six-column, eight-page newspaper. The Review has been issued for twenty-six years in tabloid size, but Publisher Dunn has recently installed a new press and decided to increase the sixe of his paper, thus making a noticeable improvement in that excellent weekly newspaper.

ANNUAL NOVENA TO BE HELD AT ST. ANNE'S, JULY 18 TO 26

The annual novena at the Church of St. Anne of the Sunset this year will be celebrated July 18 to 26, and the spiritual procession will be held Sunday afternoon, July 22. It is planned this year to make the procession a demonstration of piety and a prayer for the success of the Eucharistic Congress in Australia. The novena will be conducted by the Redemptorist Fathers, with devotions in the morning at 5:30, 6, 7, 8 and 9, and evening devotions at 6, 7:30 and 8, with afternoon devotions at 3 o'clock. Father W. G. O'Mahoney is in charge of the novena.

The Nashville Banner's paragrapher takes comfort in the fact that he has never seen one of them with the sign "Ye Olde Blynde Pigge."

NOTICE OF TRUSTEES' SALE OF REAL PROPERTY AT PUBLIC AUCTION

WHEREAS, on the 29th day of June, 1926, Nick Karavageles, an unmarried man, and Charles Gust and Anastasia Gust, his wife, executed and delivered to Agnes Gallagher their promissory note in the sum of Fifteen Hundred Dollars ($1,500.00), dated the 29th day of June, 1926, and made payable one (1) year after date with interest thereon at the rate of one per cent per month, said interest being payable monthly in advance; and

WHEREAS, for the purpose of securing the payment of said promissory note the said Nick Karavageles, Charles Gust and Anastasia Gust did execute and deliver to A. Vivaldo, as trustee for the said Agnes Gallagher, a certain deed of trust dated the 29th day of June, 1926, and recorded on the 8th day of July, 1926, in the office of the County Recorder of the County of San Mateo, State of California, in Volume 229 of Official Records, at page 452; and

WHEREAS, default has been made in the payment of said promissory note and interest, and in the performance of the obligations specified in said deed of trust to be performed by the said Nick Karavageles, Charles Gust and Anastasia Gust; and

WHEREAS, the said A. Vivaldo, as such trustee in and under the aforesaid deed of trust, because of the aforesaid default and pursuant to the terms of said promissory note and deed of trust, did, by a notice dated October 28th, 1927, give notice of such breach and of the election by said Agnes Gallagher to cause the said real property to be sold by recording such notice on the 1st day of November, 1927, in the office of the County Recorder of the County of San Mateo, State of California, in Liber 328 of Official Records at page 9; and

WHEREAS, on the 7th day of February, 1928, the said Agnes Gallagher, the beneficiary named in said deed of trust, for value received, sold assigned and transferred and set over unto Elizabeth E. Leonard and Earl S. Leonard, the said deed of trust and the promissory note mentioned above and therein, and secured thereby, together with the right to take any and all steps necessary to recover the money due thereunder, which said instrument of assignment was recorded in the office of the County Recorder of the County of San Mateo, State of California, on the 15th day of February, 1928, in Liber 332 of Official Records, at page 500; and

WHEREAS, the said Elizabeth E. Leonard and Earl S. Leonard, the present owners, holders and beneficiaries of and under the said promissory note and deed of trust as assignee of said Agnes Gallagher in accordance with the terms and provisions of said deed of trust, by an instrument in writing, dated the 24th day of May, 1928, nominated and appointed H. K. Eells and Chas. T. White as trustees in the place and stead of said A. Vivaldo, trustee as aforesaid; and

WHEREAS, pursuant to the aforesaid substitution said A. Vivaldo, as such trustee, has transferred and conveyed unto said H. K. Eells and Chas. T. White, as such substituted trustees, all of his right, title, estate and interest in and to the real property described in, together with the powers, duties and trusts specified in, the aforesaid deed of trust, such substitution of trustees, and such transfer and conveyance being evidenced by an instrument in writing, executed by the said Elizabeth E. Leonard and Earl S. Leonard, and by the said A. Vivaldo, as such trustee, and duly recorded in the office of the County Recorder of the County of San Mateo, State of California, on the 31st day of May, 1928, in Volume 353 of Official Records, at page 228; and

WHEREAS, more than three months have now elapsed since the recording of the aforesaid notice of breach; and

WHEREAS, on the 19th day of June, 1928, said Elizabeth E. Leonard and Earl S. Leonard, the present beneficiaries under the said promissory note and deed of trust, notified the said H. K. Eells and Chas. T. White, as trustees aforesaid, of their election to sell or cause to be sold the said real property, and demanded and directed that the said H. K. Eells and Chas. T. White, as trustees aforesaid, sell the said real property under the power and authority conferred upon them as such trustees aforesaid, and in accordance with the terms of said deed of trust, to satisfy the said indebtedness and to accomplish the objects and purposes of the trust created by the said deed of trust.

NOW, THEREFORE, pursuant to the said notice and demand, and in accordance with the terms and under the authority conferred by the said deed of trust, the said H. K. Eells and Chas. T. White, as trustees aforesaid, do hereby give notice that on Wednesday, the 18th day of July, A. D. 1928, at the hour of 12:00 o'clock noon of said day, at the front entrance to the City Hall at No. 51 Wellington Street, in the City of Daly City, County of San Mateo, State of California, they will sell at public auction to the highest bidder, either as a whole or in such reasonable parcels or subdivisions as in their judgment they may deem advisable, for cash, in lawful money of the United States of America, the said real property consisting of the following:

All of that portion of that certain lot, piece or parcel of land, situate, lying and being in the County of San Mateo, State of California, bounded and more particularly described as follows, to-wit:

YOUTH MEETS DEATH WHILE RIDING ON THE HIGHWAY

Harold Hardy, aged 15, was struck by two speeding cars, while riding his bicycle on the highway about a mile south of Cypress Lawn cemetery last Tuesday night, and was fatally injured, the youth passing away at a San Francisco hospital, where he was taken following the accident. His body was later identified by his parents, who live in San Francisco. While there were witnesses to the running down of the boy by the two speeding machines, they did not get the number of the cars that passed over the boy's body.

IDLE FUNDS EARN FOR STATE

Idle state of California money in the fiscal year just ended earned $6,855,236, according to a report by State Treasurer Charles G. Johnson. This is $4,270,527 in excess of whatever was earned through interest during a like period in the history of the state treasurer's office. Johnson says the recent adopted policy of lending money for stated periods has resulted in California receiving the highest rate of interest on its idle money of any state in the Union.

DRIVE AGAINST DEATH TOLL IN BUILDING COSTRUCTION

The Industrial Accident Commission of the state of California is initiating a drive against the heavy death and injury tolls in the building construction industry of the state. A plea for the fullest co-operation has been sent out to employers, employees and others interested in conserving the most precious of assets, human life. During the four years 1924, 1925, 1926 and 1297 there were 626 deaths in building and engineering construction in California. Employees to the number of 756 sustained permanent injuries, and an army of 72,018 men suffered injuries from which they recovered. The California statistical information for the four years named gives, for all industrial operations, 2,784 deaths, 4,905 permanent injuries, and 963,058 temporary injuries.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

War on California motorists who fail to place their license plates in a visible position was declared a few days ago by Frank G. Snook, chief of the State Division of Motor Vehicles. State traffic officers were called upon for strict enforcement of the motor law section which forbids the obscuring of license plates and it was announced that persistent violators will be prosecuted.

Damage from fires, which got beyond the control of State crews, burning grass along the State highway, will be paid for by the State, according to the announcement of A. R. Herron, director of the State Department of Finance. Payment in three cases where such fires have invaded neighboring grain fields already has been ordered paid.

California concerns that contract to bury their clients in event of death and give perpetual care to their resting places are under the jurisdiction of the State Insurance Commission. It was ruled recently by the State attorney general's office. The attorney general held that such contracts, when executed prior to the client's death, are in effect insurance policies.

With 326 of State parks suggested, a majority of them in Southern California, Governor Young's park commission believes sentiment in favor of the $6,000,000 park bond issue to be voted upon next November sufficiently strong to insure passage of the issue by an overwhelming majority. The surveying is still continuing, and probably as many as 700 sites for preservation under the State system will have been suggested by election day. Inasmuch as most of the suggestions are coming from organizations rather than individuals, their number can be considered a barometer of interest, according to Fred G. Stevenot, director of natural resources.

Crowded conditions at the State hospitals for mentally diseased, reported to Governor Young by Earl E. Jensen, director of institutions, presented one of the problems to be considered in preparation of the next administration budget. The six mental hospitals now are housing 13,387 patients, or 1,630 more than capacity, Jensen said. There is room for further expansion, however, and a building program is hoped for, he said, which will ultimately bring each of the six institutions to a maximum population of 3,000. That maximum will be reached by 1935, Jensen estimated, necessitating a new State hospital. Southern California, he said, particularly needed an additional institution.

A score of persons were injured, two seriously, when the Southern Pacific's Shoreline Limited crashed into a freight train in the Bayshore Yards, South of San Francisco. Slight hope was held for the recovery of the engineer and fireman, both badly scalded. Others of the train crew and passengers were treated for burns and bruises at the scene of the accident. The train was heavily loaded with holiday travelers. It left San Francisco at 8 a. m. Many of the passengers were at breakfast and were tumbled into the aisles amid broken dishes. A panic was narrowly averted by quick action of the train crew, who succeeded in quieting the hysterical passengers.

Faced with the industrial maxim that "youth must be served," middle-aged workers in some parts of California are dyeing their hair to hold their jobs. This was disclosed by Will J. French, State director of industrial relations, in an attack last week on "the growing tendency to keep lowering age limits for those in or seeking employment." He reported the problem to Gov. C. C. Young. The policy of naming a maximum age—say 35 years—for prospective employes is "anti-social," French declared. "Some wage earners," he said, "are known to be adopting what has usually been considered an exclusively feminine line of defense, so that premature or otherwise gray hairs will be discernible.

Wealth per pupil in the elementary schools of the San Francisco Bay area is above the $12,000 mark in each of the nine principal cities. Comparing true wealth in each community with average daily attendance records in the schools the State Department of Education made that assertion last week. Average wealth back of each student in grammar grades was listed as follows: San Francisco, $34,266; Alameda, $15,275; Berkeley, $19,798; Piedmont, $32,046; Richmond, $20,725; Salinas, $12,967; San Jose, $17,055; True wealth standing behind every boy and girl in high schools of the same nine cities was also estimated: San Francisco, $114,667; Alameda, $37,666; Berkeley, $40,192; Oakland, $54,593; Palo Alto, $40,711; Piedmont, $42,379; Richmond, $82,861; Salinas, $66,836; San Jose, $33,904.

The demand for babies to adopt in California during the past year was far in excess of the supply, and as a result 421 couples were unable to find orphans to take into their homes. These facts were revealed a few days ago in a report of the Native Sons and Daughters' central committee on homeless children, dealing with the fiscal year ending April 1st. The report set forth that 621 homes sought to adopt children, but only 200 orphans were available. Prior to April, 1927, the report revealed, 6,903 homes had been offered for homeless children, while altogether 2,390 orphans were adopted.

LEFTHANDERS CAN TOUCH SOUTHPAWS

Stars of Olden Days Could Hit All Pitching.

This recently introduced baseball practice of switching lineups to put in as many right-hand batters as possible against left-hand pitchers is sheer bunk, if you will believe the old-timers.

The big leaguers of the day of Keeler, Jajoie and Wagner were never switched around, no matter who was pitching, and they hit just as hard and as often as the pampered athletes of today, they'll point out.

Take, for instance, Mike Donlin, who is quoted by Bozeman Bulger in the Farm Journal. Mike, who was about as good as they come when he was a Giant fifteen years ago, thinks the modern ballplayers are suffering from a "southpaw complex."

"You see," says Mike. "We didn't know in the old days that we were supposed to be weak against these cockeyes. Most any of these fellows today, I think, could hit left-handed pitching if they hadn't been influenced by fool talk.

Bulger, himself, who has followed the big leagues as a sports writer for more than a generation, declares that "twenty or thirty years ago such a procedure would have been hooted at."

"Most of the managers," he says, "will agree that the belief that a left-hand batter cannot hit a southpaw is largely psychological, but it has become so fixed in the minds of some batters that most all of the clubs are now put to the expense of carrying what are technically known as 'switch hitters.' Leslie Mann, a veteran of several clubs, has earned his living for years simply by his ability to 'murder' left-handers. He is used for practically no other purpose, although he is a good outfielder and a great baserunner."

There may be a point of logic, Bulger admits, in the fact that right-hand batters are more effective against southpaws because they do most of their hitting against right-hand pitching. That being the hardest pitching for them to hit, they are consequently more effective against left-handers.

But to offset that argument, his Farm Journal article points out that great players of the Speaker, Cobb, Ruth or Collins caliber, whose presence is necessary to the team on the defensive as well as the offensive, have refused to admit any such weakness and, consequently, have gone ahead hitting left-handers with all the effectiveness that they apply to the right-handed brethren.

Berghammer Shouted in Hank O'Day's Good Ear

Hank O'Day, National league umpire, is one of the most interesting figures in the game today, relates Al Demaree. Hank is slightly hard of hearing and while this may be an advantage to an umpire, it has led to many an amusing situation.

O'Day managed the Cincinnati Reds for a while a few years back. Some of the players used to take advantage of Hank's bad ear, and, sitting on his deaf side, would indulge in some choice personalities at Hank's expense. Hank, of course, couldn't hear them and it was great fun for the other players.

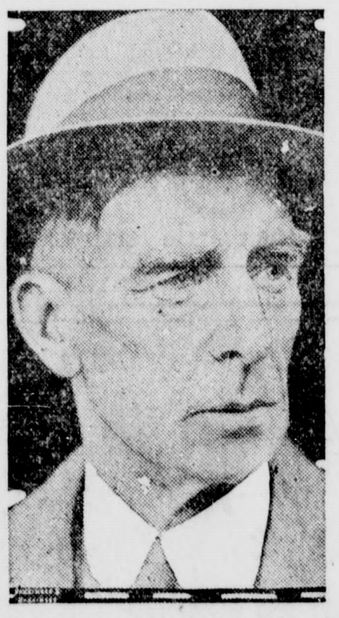
One day Marty Berghammer, second baseman, sat down beside O'Day, and, winking at the other players, shouted, "Go take a jump in the river, you old fathead."

Quick as a flash Hank turned around and yelled, "Go take a jump in yourself and see how you like it."

Marty nearly fell off the bench. He had sat down on the wrong side of Hank and yelled in the good ear.

Players used to pull the same stunt on Frank Chance, the old Chicago leader, who had been "beaned" so many times that it affected the hearing in one ear.

Connie Mack's Aids



One of the best reasons why the Philadelphia Athletics stand in second place in the American league, I said to be because Mgr. Connie Mack, one of the oldest managers in the game has three players wearing the ancient regalia and represent ninety-three years of professional baseball. They are Ty Cobb, Eddie Collins and John Picus Quinn. The photograph shows Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Athletics.

Mother Risks Life To Save Little Son

Marion, Ill.—Mrs. Verious Allen Fairmount threw herself under a tractor disk-harrow and saved the life of her three-year-old son, but was critically hurt.

The tractor was standing in the farm yard with the engine running when Mrs. Fairmount's two small sons climbed on the machine to play. They threw the machine into gear and the younger son toppled from the seat in front of the moving harrow.

Mrs. Fairmount threw her body between the knives of the harrow which passed over her.

CHARGE FELON'S ORGANS STOLEN

Say Executed Man Was Robbed of "Innards."

San Francisco.—Charges that certain organs and glands were taken from the body of Clarence (Buck) Kelly immediately after his execution at San Quentin recently and grafted on a patient in a San Francisco hospital have been made by Attorney Milton U'ren, acting for Kelly's relatives. The heart, brain and several other organs were removed and the body mutilated before it was released by prison authorities, he asserted.

The state prison board assembled at San Quentin to consider the matter and determine the truth or falsity of the reports.

The body was removed after the execution to the undertaking parlors of Keaton & Dusel in San Rafael and it was there that the asserted discovery of the mutilation was made. The undertaker told U'ren the body had been mutilated within the prison, and added that he had been kept waiting within the walls for an hour and a half for the body after the execution.

Warden Holohan expressed himself as being shocked at the report. He promised to investigate the charges to the best of his ability and proceed against the guilty persons if any evidence of guilt is discovered.

Dr. L. L. Stanley, prison physician, declined to make extended comment on the charges.

He asserted, however, that "it is customary to perform an autopsy on all persons dying within the prison without special consent of relatives."

Royal Bengal Tiger Claws Ship Stevedore

New York.—Clawed by a wild royal Bengal tiger, Christopher Ricardo, a stevedore employed here, is alive to tell the tale.

Ricardo was in the dark hold of the steamer City of Evansville recently attaching crane hooks to cages of wild animals which had arrived aboard. There were several cages of laughing hyenas, 2 cages of tigers, 40 of monkeys, 8 of vultures, 6 of cranes, and 17 of snakes.

A cage of vultures, swinging in mid-air, caught on an obstruction. The men above called to Ricardo to release it. In running to do so he passed too close to one of the cages of tigers. A powerful, velvety claw lunged at him out of the cage and ripped his side. He fell screaming.

The scent of blood set the other beasts frantic, and their frenzied howls drowned out Ricardo's cries for help. Jacob Strumm, the German trainer who had supervised the care of the animals on the ocean voyage, descended and rescued Ricardo. But for the trainer's quick action, surgeons said, he would have bled to death.

He Pressed the Stick; Then Things Happened

London.—Flight Lieut. Eyre, R. A. F., reached for his map; he missed and it slipped into a corner of his cockpit. Two thousand feet over Essex and he undid his safety straps and reached again. Unintentionally he pressed the control stick forward. The plane stalled suddenly and an astonished flyer found himself catapulted into midair. With presence of mind he pulled his parachute cord, landed unhurt, lighted a cigaret, and addressed a gasping rustic: "I wonder where my kite's gone?"

Hoax Fails to Restore Man's Estranged Wife

Kalamazoo, Mich.—George Kilgore's determined effort to effect a reconciliation with his estranged wife apparently was in vain. Kilgore recently was found bound and gagged in his room, apparently the victim of a mysterious letter writer who had sent threatening letters to him and his wife. The letters threatened personal injury to Kilgore unless his wife consentend to return to him. After a severe grilling by the police Kilgore is said to have confessed the assault plot was a hoax.

All Night on Buoy

Coronado, Calif.—After clinging to a beacon buoy in the bay above here all night, Sidney Graham, of San Diego, was rescued by sailors from a passing ship.

Graham was rowing in a racing shell near the buoy when it capsized. He managed to swim to the beacon.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

BRIGHT MR. SUN.

Mr. Sun was shining through the trees and making the woods look very lovely. Oh, how the trees whispered in the breezes and how they laughed and chatted as they played and romped together.

The Fairy Queen had arranged all sorts of fine entertainment for her party.

She had see-saws, and slides and bars to swing upon and everything you can imagine.

Pine Trees Sang Songs.

The fairies sang this song:

Listen all, listen all,
Come to the ball, come to the ball.
It will be great,
For we're going to slide
And also to glide,
Yes, come to the ball,
Come to the ball.

They arrived in the afternoon before it became dark.

"Will you help me, Pine Trees?" the Fairy Queen asked.

And the pine trees bowed their great heads and whispered in their soft woodland way, "Oh—oh—oh, we want to help, we want to help."

So the pine trees sang songs, too, and the trees with leaves kept up a steady chatter and singing and whispering and laughing.

Such sounds of merriment as there were in Fairyland that afternoon, that lovely summer afternoon.

Mr. Sun was there for a little while, and he sang this song:

Every one is happy
And glad,
And gay!
I hope every one
Will always
Be that Way!

Oh, how the brownies and gnomes and elves clapped when they heard this.

"You've made a rhyme, Mr. Sun," they said.

"I didn't know I was going to," said Mr. Sun.

"You didn't know you were a poet, eh?" they asked.

"I didn't," said Mr. Sun. "And I don't think I'm one now after that little rhyme."

"We think you are, Mr. Sun, and we're glad to have had you as our guest."

Mr. Sun Smiled at the Compliment.

Mr. Sun smiled at the compliment of the fairies.

"I must be going now," he said.

"We've all loved having you; you've greatly added to the party."

As soon as Mr. Sun disappeared behind a hill, all the fairies and gnomes and brownies and elves, led by the Fairy Queen, Witty Witch and Mr. Giant sang:

We love Mr. Sun,
He is such fun,
He is such fun,
Is bright Mr. Sun.

An Outdoor Game

Here is a good outdoor game. Begin by drawing a base or den at each end of the ground, then all the players but one go into one of the dens. The "out" player takes his stand in the middle of the ground, and calls to any player he chooses by name. As soon as he is named, this player must run across to the empty den; that is, if he can, for, of course, the "out" player tries to catch him as he crosses. If he succeeds in getting in, however, he calls "A bar," and every one on the opposite side runs across to join him. The "out" player begins to count while they run, one, two, three, four, up to ten, and if all the players are in the den by the time ten is reached, that side score one. Any who are not safely across are liable to be caught by the "out" player, and if he manages to catch anyone, that player must stand with him in the middle, and help to capture the others, two of the opposite side being named. Should no one be caught, the same "out" player must do duty again. Every time a called player gets across to the den he may shout: "A bar."

THE ODORIFEROUS BULB

What would the cook do without some member of the onion family for food and flavor? As a food it takes a large place in the weekly menus; as a flavor it is in daily use.

When onions are used in stuffing or in scalloped dishes which are not long baked, the onion should be chopped and sauted in a little butter to insure its being well cooked.

Where a bit of onion in salad will be noticed by a fussy member of the family, scrape it or extract a litle juice for flavor by twisting the cut side of an onion on a grater near the groove, when the juice will run down into the dish.

Another very appetizing dish is cabbage prepared as follows: Boil a whole firm head, removing the tough center. Boil tied in a cloth if it seems not compact. When tender, drain and cut down into pie-shaped pieces and pour over a rich white sauce to which a cupful of grated cheese has been added. Served on a large chop plate. This makes a most attractive main dish.

Baked Onions With Cabbage.—Parboil until partly cooked, enough cabbage to serve the family. Place in layers in a buttered baking dish with a layer of cheese between, top with another layer and pour over plenty of white sauce well seasoned, to moisten. Bake until thoroughly cooked.

Add an onion to a dish of baked beans when ready to put into the oven. A bit of shredded onion or chives adds much to a dish of cottage cheese. When using onions for salads if the juice is used it is not apt to leave an odor on the breath. Small bits of onion are not always easily digested and thus scent the breath unpleasantly.

Stuffed Onions.—Take even-sized mild onions and remove the centers carefully, leaving enough wall to hold the filling. Parboil the onions and fill with any desired filling—sausage, bread crumbs and seasoning make a very tasty filling. Put into a hot oven and baste with stock or water and butter. At the last place a spoonful of buttered crumbs on top of each and brown.

Onions are valuable in pulmonary troubles; used as poultices they have saved may a serious illness. Chop the onion and mix with a little rye flour (this because it is sticky and perhaps holds its moisture longer), add a bit of vinegar to moisten and apply to the chest of any patient suffering with bronchial or lung trouble. Put the onion on a thin cloth and cover.

Cakes for Summer Fetes

Many of the cakes which are so ornamental, that are served at weddings, receptions and other functions may be made in the home kitchen at much less cost. The small cakes to serve with a cup of tea or cocoa are no more than a good bite (bonne bouche) but are so attractive that their popularity never wanes.

For any such cakes, all materials should be of the best and measurements carefully made. All flour should be sifted before measuring and level measurements of all ingredients should be made.

After baking, the cakes should be carefully cooled then packed away. Cakes may be made a week in advance of the time needed.

Sweethearts.—Cream two-thirds of a cupful of butter and one-half cupful of powdered sugar together, add a teaspoonful of boiling water, one teaspoonful of vanilla, beat well, then add two eggs, one at a time and beat one minute after each addition. Now stir in three cupfuls of pastry flour gradually and when the dough leaves the sides of the bowl turn it out on a pastry table with one cupful of flour. Knead lightly; the dough must be smooth but not sticky to the hands. Place it back in the bowl and cover with a towel and let stand two hours. When ready to roll take out part of the dough and roll one-fourth inch thick. Cut with a heart-shaped cutter, place on baking sheets and bake slowly. Lay aside the trimmings for later use. Now roll and bake the remainder of the dough, reserving the trimmings. When the cakes are cold ice them, decorate with bits of fruit, or candied violets; any number of flower-like decorations make them most festive.

Baked Bananas With Current Jelly.—Loosen a section from the skin of each banana. Put bananas in granite-ware pan, bake until soft. Remove the skins and roll in powdered macaroon crumbs. Surround with currant jelly which has been beaten in boiling water. Thicken the sauce with a teaspoonful of butter and one teaspoonful of lemon juice.

Cute in a Baby—Awful at Three —and it's Dangerous

by Ruth Brittain

Thumb sucking does look sweet in a baby, but it is disgusting in the three-year-old and sometimes it hangs on until fifteen or sixteen! The habit may cause an ill-formed mouth or induce adenoids; and it always interferes with digestion. Pinning the sleeve over the hand; attaching mittens, or putting on cardboard cuffs, which prevent bending the arms at the elbows, are some of the ways to stop the habit.

Another bad habit—irregularity in bowel action—is responsible for weak bowels and constipation in babies. Give the tiny bowels an opportunity to act at regular periods each day. If they don't act at first, a little Fletcher's Castoria will soon regulate them. Every mother should keep a bottle of it handy to use in case of colic, cholera, diarrhea, gas on stomach and bowels, constipation, loss of sleep, or when baby is cross and feverish. Its gentle influence over baby's system enables him to get full nourishment from his food, helps him gain, strengthens his bowels.

Castoria is purely vegetable and harmless—the recipe is on the wrapper. Physicians have prescribed it for over 30 years. With each package, you get a valuable book on Motherhood. Look for Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper so you'll get the genuine.

VETS OPPOSE REPEAL OF STATE BOXING LAW

Gold Stripe veterans, members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, are leading the state wide movement against the repeal of the state boxing law. In Sacramento, Gus Ohlson, editor of the Sacramento Veteran, is heading the movement. In Los Angeles a committee of the combined V. F. W. posts are disseminating information of the benefits the Veterans' Home at Napa derives from the five per cent tax on boxing shows which would be lost if the bill is repealed by the voters of the state. In San Francisco a committee of F. W. Galbraith Post No. 818, Veterans of Foreign Wars, is attempting to acquaint the public with the advantages to veterans and citizens of the state accruing from the operations of the present state boxing law and state supervision of boxing.

Frank W. Smith, veteran of four offensives overseas, the army of occupation, and a former officer of Rhineland Post No. 700, V. F. W., Coblenz, Germany, Harold N. Meredith Post, No. 927, Anniston, Alabama, and native San Franciscan, heads the committee directing the work.

Outside of the fact that veterans of all wars who are inmates of the Veterans' Home at Napa, and veterans who in the future may become inmates of the home, and that the new million dollar edifice is under construction with moneys derived from the tax on boxing shows, Harold J. Boyd, veteran leader of California and commander of the county council, V. F. W., explains just why his organization is opposed to the repeal.

"It is against all principles of Americanism for an organized minority to seek to dictate just what form of amusement should be seen by the majority of the population," he declared. "The forces against this state supervision of boxing say that they are not opposed to amateur boxing. Amateur boxing, in the accepted sense, is only held in the leading clubs to which the average war veteran and citizen, for economic reasons, could not afford to join. Therefore, this becomes class legislation directed against a poor man's pleasure. But of course if the law is repealed we shall see 'bootleg amateur shows,' where neither the public or the boxers will receive any protection, and the game will be under the direction of local officials who, as in the past, will place their favorites in control of these so-called amateur shows. This will result in local monopolies. There will be no benevolent tax collected, no commission to suspend foul participants, and no protection for the public.

"The history of the boxing game shows that the reasons set forth by Boyd are sound," says a prominent advocate of the retention of the present boxing law. "In New York state, before and after the old Horton law was enacted and then repealed, professional boxing was held in old barns, on barges, in fields, and admission to select persons was $100. The 'amateur' fought for medals and the medals were turned in for cash. But the public was in no way protected and no taxes were realized. This would be the result of the repeal of the beneficial laws governing the the sport in California. Under the law as it now stands, the Veterans' Home at Napa receives upwards of $125,000 annually from the boxing tax. The money is being used to construct a decent home for the warriors of all of America's campaigns who have become disabled and are unable to work to pass their declining years. They are now living in old wooden fire-traps, constructed in 1860. The present home is known as the Napa 'Salvage Pile' by visiting veterans, who want to see the million dollar edifice constructed. This work can continue if the boxing law is kept on the books."

"GLORIOUS BETSY" COMING TO THE EMBASSY THEATRE

A romance of such magnitude as to almost become a part of history of the United States is that of Betsy Patterson, the beautiful Baltimore belle, who was wooed and won by Jerome Bonaparte, brother of Napoleon. Rida Johnson Young, former wife of James Young, the great nephew of Edwin Booth, who spent a large portion of her life in Baltimore, has written a story colorful and accurate of this first international marriage.

It is called "Glorious Betsy." Warner Brothers have made a remarkable screen adaptation of the story and it is being shown on the screen at the Embassy Theatre, San Francisco. As if this really fine picture were not enough the interest is further enhanced by the fact that it is given Vitaphone accompaniment and therefore the voice of Dolores Costello, the star, and Conrad Nagle, the leading man, are heard in the most impressive scenes during which the dialogue is given over this sound reproducing device.

In addition to this feature Eddie Peabody and his banjo furnish a part of the Vitaphone bill. Then there are the Five Foys, children of the late Eddie Foy, an interesting act. A really funny comedy, "Hollywood Bound," and other attractions round out an interesting program.

Prof. Borler of the University of Lyons, France, has recently invented a machine which he claims will cure a cold in ten minutes, through generating a high frequency current known as diathermic heat which penetrates the tissues of the nasal membrane and kills the germs.

MAY TALK TO FRIENDS IN SWEDEN AND MEXICO

Trans-Atlantic telephone service was extended to Malmo, Sweden, on July 1. On the same day it was extended to Mexico, and the following Mexican cities will be able to use the European service: Mexico City, Neuvo Laredo, Tampico, San Luis Potosi, Saltillo, Queretaro. Announcement of this service was made by the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company.

Service from Mexico will be over the International Telephone and Telegraph lines of the Mexican Telephone and Telegraph Company connecting with the long lines of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company in the United States and the transoceanic radio telephone in co-operation with the British postoffice and the various telephone systems in European countries.

It is an interesting fact that through the inauguration of this service Mexico will be placed in immediate and regular telephonic contact with over 250,000,000 inhabitants of other countries having over 80 per cent of the world's telephones.

The greatest distance which the human voice will travel in the establishment of this new service will be between Mexico City and Stockholm, which is a distance of 8,181 miles. This is just 125 miles short of the greatest distance over which telephone conversation has been effected, which was the case in a recent call from Yakima, Washington, to Stockholm, a distance of 8,306 miles.

Having arrived at an understanding of the buying habits of the community, get in touch with jobbers and manufacturers and learn from them the profits that are made from different lines of merchandise, for the profit is all that you will get for yourself out of your own business.

As the choice narrows, keep your eye open for merchandise that is highly consumptive, articles that wear out and which bring repeat sales.

Study the competition you will have to meet. In some communities there are stores so strongly entrenched that they have earned the good will and patronage of the public. To attempt to compete with such a store presents obstacles that are obvious. There are in every locality stores that are mismanaged, and inadequately stocked, whose proprietors have no conception of the meaning of the word service. To compete with such a store would not be difficult for an active young man.—John Fletcher in Forbes Magazine.

VOLUME I FRIDAY, JULY 13, 1928 NUMBER 50

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

Proof Positive

"I once knew a man who stayed home with his wife every night for thirty years."

"Ah! that was true love."

"No, it was paralysis."

He Must Have Been Scotch

Mrs. Nodimes: "Is your husband tight, like mine?"

Mrs. Nickeless: "Is he? Say, every time he takes a penny out of his pocket the Indian blinks at the light."

Leave it to Them

"I can't marry him, mother. He's an atheist, and doesn't believe there's a hell."

Marry him, my dear, and between us we'll convince him that he's wrong."

Gratitude

"Are you the man who saved my boy from drowning when he fell off the dock?"

"Yes."

"Well, where's his cap?"

June Pome

"Oh, look at that tree; why does it bend?"
Asked the fair young thing of a farmer friend.
"If you were as full as full could be
Of very green apples as is that tree,
You'd hafta bend over, too," quoth he.

Build Your Home Now!

Jim: "This butter is so strong it walks over to the coffee and says 'How do you do?'"

Jam: "Yes, but the coffee is too weak to answer."

EVERYTHING in Builders' Hardware.

Judge: "Prisoner, did you steal that rug?"

Prisoner: "No, your honor. A lady gave it to me and told me to beat it—and I did."

Now is the time to buy your winter coal.

Ambition delivers the goods.
